"CHANCE"

(Now in its Second Large Edition)

By JOSEPH CONRAD

Author of "Youth," "Romance," "'Twixt Land and Sea," etc.

You can't escape such testimony as this:

BASIL KING, author of "The Inner Shrine," "The Way Home," etc., says:

"'Chance' is a book that could have been written by no one but a master—a book which it is well-nigh a duty for every lover of good writing to read."

LOUIS JOSEPH VANCE, author of "Joan Thursday," says:

"'Chance' seems to me to be an extraordinary achievement, a book of tremendous power. I have a feeling that the figures of De Barral, Flora and Anthony will haunt me for years."

JAMES HUNEKER, well-known critic, says that Conrad is:

"The only man in England to-day who belongs to the immortal company Meredith, Hardy and Henry James."

H. G. WELLS, English Novelist, author of "The Passionate Friends," "Tono-Bungay," etc., says:

"One of my chief claims to distinction in the world is that I wrote the first long appreciative review of Joseph Conrad's work."

JOHN GALSWORTHY, English novelist, author of "The Dark Flower," etc., wrote of Conrad's books in 1908:

"The writing of these ten books is probably the only writing of the last twelve years that will enrich the English language to a great extent."

WALTER PRICHARD EATON, well-known critic and short-story writer, says:

"It is that story which absorbs us, as it absorbed him, and we are tense always for his next discovery. The method gives to Flora a curious lifelikeness, impossible to describe, for it keeps her perpetually but half-revealed to us. It is the method of an artist who knows full well what he is about.

KATE LANGELY BOSHER, author of "Mary Cary," and other books:

"Joseph Conrad has earned and deserves the place he holds among the best English writers of to-day, and his sincerity of purpose, devotion to art, and skill of craftsmanship are admitted by all intelligent readers of his books. . . . May the people indeed praise him—as well as the critics—for this his last book, and may they not only praise but BUY!!"

GOUVERNEUR MORRIS, well-known writer of short stories says:

"More and more I hear people say: 'Have you read Conrad's latest?' Those who haven't read him are not well-read. Those who don't intend to read him are of a foolish and slovenly mental habit. As for those who are engaged in reading him—for the first time—oh, my word, how I envy them!"

WINSTON CHURCHILL, author of "The Inside of the Cup," etc.

"I have long been an admirer of his work, and it will make me very happy if, through your efforts, his books shall get that attention here which they so richly deserve."

LITTLE LOST SISTER

By VIRGINIA BROOKS

A NOVEL based on facts gleaned from the most sensational and thorough investigation of the sordid conditions surrounding the social evil ever conducted by an individual.

MISS BROOKS has succeeded in putting the results of her famous efforts to investigate vice into story form in a way that will thrill her readers with a deeper sense of personal nearness to the dangers that constantly beset our young. Every mother and father; every young man and young woman should, as a personal duty, read Little Lost Sister.

LITTLE LOST SISTER is a story that impresses deeply while it entertains pleasantly. It conveys in burning word pictures the awful experiences of Elsie Welcome in her pathetic fight against the fate to which she had been unknowingly lured. Little Lost Sister is a novel with a purpose. It is a wonderful piece of story writing and presses home a deep moral without moralizing.

HISTORICAL PAPERS OF RARE INTEREST
UPON MEN AND EVENTS IN THE NAPOLEONIC EPOCH

A Work in Two Volumes

With Maps, Portraits and Reproductions of Famous Paintings

By JOSEPH HEPBURN PARSONS

A series of Papers shedding a more intimate light on some of the most interesting persons and events of that shining quarter of a century which witnessed the explosion of that mighty volcano, the French Revolution.

The author presents the full historical facts which he has collected from many sources in the world's great libraries, reinforced by and intermingled with those smaller, more intimate details of fact, of letters and of authentic anecdote which, after all, endow history with its more human interest.

LEGAL MINDS:

Lawyers will find the Paper on the Code of Napoleon, the Laws of Succession or Inheritance, and Divorce in France and America of peculiar interest.

FINANCIERS:

The account of the foundation of the Bank of France, its system of organization and operation to the present time will appeal to those who follow finance.

BUSINESS MEN:

The Assembly of the Great Sanhedrim by the Emperor Napoleon in Paris, 1700 years after its last sitting marked the modern regeneration of the ancient Hebrew race which to-day exercises so profound an influence upon business affairs.

ARMY AND NAVY:

The several Papers relating to that momentous struggle between Freedom and Despotisn cannot fail to attract the attention of the army and navy as well as of all those interested in the recital of some of the most thrilling battle tragedies in the life of the world.

New Guides to Old Masters

By John C. Van Dyke

Professor of the History of Art at Rutgers College, and author of "The Meaning of Pictures," "What is Art?", etc.

12 Volumes, each with frontispiece

A series of art guides, whose little volumes, unique in conception and execution, should be as natural and essential a part of every man's traveling equipment as the Baedeker guide-books are now.

They are the only descriptive and critical art guides in existence. They are written by the high authority on art, who is probably better acquainted than any other writer living, with the European galleries.

They are composed of clear, pointed critical notes upon individual pictures, written before those pictures by the author.

They deal comprehensively with practically all of the European galleries; and therefore discuss and explain practically all the important paintings that hang in those galleries.

They are so manufactured as to be easily carried, and they combine perfcetly the qualities of beauty and durability.

THE "RIGHT" TO FIX "RESALE PRICES."

IN the trade as well as out of it there is no little misconception as to the "rights"—legal and moral—of a seller in setting the price the purchaser of a given piece of property must put on it if he resells it. Many an earnest advocate of net price maintenance as such fails to understand how a wholesaler has any "right" to insist upon a resale price being fixed.

Take, for example, a well-known brand of talking machines. Plastered on the back of them every purchaser finds, or until recently at least found, a long document, couched in legal terms, which says in effect that the purchaser of the machine, who supposed he was buying it, has really bought only a "license" to use it, and warning said purchaser that if he uses with it any other than the machine's own brand of needles and records, or has bought the machine, or should buy needles or records, at any less prices than those duly fixed by the manufacturer, or should do any other of certain specific further things forbidden—then the "license" is cancelled and title to the machine reverts to the manufacturer.

Now, by the decisions of the Supreme Court of the United States in the Dick mimeograph case certain of the above restrictive clauses are held to be actually illegal, and by other decisions of the same court some doubt is cast upon the legality of other clauses in this "license," or upon all of it. But the point to be made here is not a legal one at all. To put it bluntly, the whole notice seems to the average citizen who has paid his good money for a talking machine most high-handed arrogance. He does not understand the reasons behind it, he considers it an insufferable interference with his own "rights." And many a bookseller, asked to explain what "right" a manufacturer had in a product to which he had sold title (leaving aside any "licensing" technicalities) would be at some loss for an answer.

Yet it is very clear to any careful student of merchandizing that the wholesaler has very real and definite rights and can be worked, in an invasion of them, very actual harm. And because Mr. W. H. C. Clarke, in recent hearings on proposed trust legislation before the House Judiciary Committee at Washington, outlined in his testimony in some detail this particular point, the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY has thought it worth while to reprint his remarks in extenso.

"Predatory price-cutting"—to use Mr. Rogers' apt phrase—attacks only goods of more or less well established reputation; it fails of its purpose, in fact, unless the goods it attacks have a reputation, and is effective in proportion to the strength of reputation of the goods whose prices are cut. But—to summarize Mr. Clarke's and Mr. Rogers' argument very briefly—this trade reputation is an asset of great, sometimes immense, value. It may have been built up slowly by years of fair dealing, been purchased by enormous and long continued advertising expenditure, been created and fostered by a sales policy of large value and a small margin of profit. However acquired, trade reputation has been earned and paid for; it has a cash value perhaps less tangible but oftentimes much greater than all the manufacturer's other assets. To appropriate, destroy or diminish that reputation is in effect as serious a crime as grand larceny.

But there is no denying that price-cutting is deadly to this sort of goodwill. Ingersoll watches may be amazingly good value at that price, but the price-cutter who sells them at a loss at fifty-eight cents fosters the impression that $1 means extravagant profits to their manufacturer. He is killing their well-earned goodwill, actually robbing their maker of his legitimately acquired property. Furthermore, if continued, price-cutting inevitably —inevitably—drives the price-cut goods out of the market. Through no fault of his own the manufacturer loses his retail outlets. His goodwill, his trade reputation, for which he may have spent millions, is destroyed, perhaps by the persistent hounding of a single price-cutter.

Has the manufacturer no moral "right" to fix "resale" prices?

WE reprint elsewhere in this issue the text of the Stevens bill to legalize fixed prices which was introduced into the House last month. Although it is considered unlikely by those best informed that this particular bill will make much legislative progress, net price legislation in some form is being so earnestly urged and widely discussed that some such relief is not improbable. Despite the interest which publishers and booksellers naturally take in this pending legislation, representatives of neither have so far taken any part in either the shaping of the bills in question or in the presentation before the committees of arguments in their support.

SUBSEQUENTLY to the Stevens bill a second net price measure, the Metz bill, was introduced into the House. The full text of the latter bill has not come to the notice of the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY but its purport is to extend the law of unfair competition one step, to prevent the impairment of trade-mark rights by cutting prices on trade-marked articles. The distinction between it and the Stevens bill is that the latter attempts to legalize a system of contracts by which net prices on trade-marked articles could be maintained; whereas the Metz bill, instead of being a contract bill, is what may be described as a "notice" bill—that is to say, it aims to give force and effect to a price notice, which may be attached to the article itself or served on the trade through the usual trade channels.

THERE is one man in the publishing trade whom all who know the history of the trade especially delight to honor and that is George Haven Putnam, who completed his seventieth year on Friday of this week. The story of his life is one of extraordinary and varied interests and his fulfilling of three score years and ten is marked by the publication of the first chapter of these memoirs, of which it has required a full volume to tell the story of his boyhood interests in literary and publishing affairs through association with his father, George Palmer Putnam, of honored memory, his university life in Germany and his experiences and stirring adventures in the Civil War. It is to be hoped that he may be spared for many years of work ahead, so that he may complete the memoirs and record with his own pen his later experiences as a publisher and his wide relations with authors and scholars in England as well as America. His middle and later years during which he has devoted himself to building up into large success the house which his father founded, have been full of public spirit without the trade, in all good causes, as well as within it; and within it he has been foremost in international copyright and in the protection of the trade from attacks from various quarters, the Treasury Department in particular. In 1891, at the conclusion of his labors on behalf of international copyright, a few of his fellow publishers representing the houses of historic name, gave him a loving cup inscribed on its five sides "With the Love of Harper; With the Love of Appleton; With the Love of Scribner; With the Love of Holt; For the Love of Putnam", and on Friday his seventieth birthday was fittingly celebrated with a dinner at the Century Club in which a larger circle of publishing and other friends joined to do him honor. And here's to his eightieth birthday! —and ten years of good work between.

THE STEVENS BILL TO LEGALIZE NET PRICES.

ON Feb. 12th, Representative Stevens, of New Hampshire, introduced in the lower house of Congress a measure authorizing the standardization of prices the consumer pays to the dealer, and making legal, under certain conditions imposed by the measure, agreements between manufacturers and dealers as to what these prices shall be. The bill represents the views of the Fair Trade League. The following is its text in full:

A BILL

To prevent discrimination in prices and to provide for publicity of prices to dealers and to the public.

Be it enacted by the Senate and House of Representatives of the United States of America in Congress assembled, That in any contract for the sale of articles of commerce to any dealer, wholesale or retail, by any producer, grower, manufacturer, or owner thereof, under trade-mark or special brand, hereinafter referred to as the "vendor," it shall be lawful for such vendor, whenever the contract constitutes a transaction of commerce among the several states, or with foreign nations, or in any territory of the United States, or in the District of Columbia, or between any such territory and another, or between any such territory or territories and any states or the District of Columbia, or with a foreign nation or nations, or between the District of Columbia and any state or states or a foreign nation or nations, to prescribe the sole uniform price at which each article covered by such contract may be resold: Provided, That the following conditions are complied with:

(A) Such vendor shall not have any monopoly or control of the market for articles belonging to the same general class of merchandise as such article or articles of commerce as shall be covered by such contract of sale; nor shall such vendor be a party to any agreement, combination, or understanding with any competitor in the production, manufacture, or sale of any merchandise in the same general class in regard to the price at which the same shall be sold either to dealers at wholesale or retail or to the public.

(B) Such vendor shall affix a notice to each article of commerce or to each carton, package, or other receptacle inclosing an article of commerce covered by such contract of sale stating the price prescribed by the vendor at the time of the delivery of said article as the uniform price of sale of such article to the public, and the name and address of such vendor, and bearing the said trade-mark or special brand of such vendor. Such article or articles of commerce covered thereby shall not be resold except with such notice affixed thereto or to the cartons, packages, or other receptacles inclosing the same.

(C) Such vendor shall file in the Bureau of Corporations a statement setting forth the trade-mark or special brand owned or claimed by such vendor in respect of such article or articles of commerce to be covered by such contract of sale, and also, from time to time, as the same may be adopted or modified, a schedule setting forth the uniform price of sale thereof to dealers at wholesale, and the uniform price of sale thereof at retail to dealers from whatever source acquired and the uniform price of sale thereof to the public and upon filing such statement such vendor shall pay to the Commissioner of Corporations a registration fee of $10. The price to the vendee under any such contract shall be one of such uniform prices to wholesale and to retail dealers according as such vendee shall be a dealer at wholesale or a dealer at retail, and there shall be no discrimination in favor of any vendee by the allowance of a discount for any cause, by the grant of any special concession or allowance, or by the payment of any rebate or commission, or by any other device whatsoever.

(D) Any article of commerce or any carton, package, or other receptacle inclosing an article or articles of commerce covered by such contract and in possession of a dealer may be sold for a price other than the uniform price for re-sale by such dealer as set forth in the schedule provided in the next preceding paragraph (C): First, if such dealer shall cease to do business and the sale is made in the course of winding up the business of such dealer, or if such dealer shall have become bankrupt, or a receiver of the business of such dealer shall have been appointed, provided that such article or articles of commerce shall have first been offered to the vendor thereof by such dealer or the legal representative of such dealer by written offer at the price paid for the same by such dealer, and that such vendor, after reasonable opportunity to inspect such article or articles, shall have refused or neglected to accept such offer, or, second, if such article of commerce or contents of such carton, package, or other receptacle shall have become damaged, deteriorated, or soiled: Provided, That such damaged, deteriorated, or soiled article shall have first been offered to the vendor by such dealer by written offer, at the price paid for the same by such dealer, and that such vendor, after reasonable opportunity to inspect such article or articles, shall have refused or neglected to accept such offer, and that such damaged, deteriorated, or soiled article shall thereafter only be offered for sale by such dealer with prominent notice to the purchaser that such article is damaged, deteriorated, or soiled, and that the price thereof is reduced because of such damage.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS ON NET PRICE MAINTENANCE.

THE House Judiciary Committee for several weeks, in the course of its hearings on the various proposed anti-trust bills, took up from time to time the question of net price maintenance, upon which two of the pending Committee bills have something more or less indirectly to say.

Among the many important and carefully reasoned presentations of the subject made to the Committee none was more clearly phrased than that of Mr. W. H. C. Clarke, of the law firm of Moore & Clarke of Washington, D. C., who incorporated in his remarks an interesting letter from Mr. Clarke to Mortimer Byers, the secretary of the National Association of Stationers and an article on "Predatory price cutting as unfair trade," by Edward Rogers of Chicago, which was reprinted from the Harvard Law Review. The following digest summarizes some of the more important points made in each of these three articles.

Mr. Clarke said:

BRANDED VS. UNBRANDED COMMODITIES.

Commodities entering into interstate commerce fall roughly into two classes, which I shall describe as branded commodities and unbranded commodities.

By unbranded commodities I mean commodities which enter into commerce without any designation of their origin. They might be likened to mavericks, in that they contain no brand or indication of their proprietors or original producers. The other class of commodities are the branded commodities, by which I mean trade-marked commodities, which carry on them or in connection with them some brand or indication of their origin.

The principal characteristics of branded or trade-marked commodities are that they are uniform in character and that they carry with them the good-will or reputation of the originating proprietor, who assumes the responsibility for the commodity and is willing to take any blame for any defect which may develop in it.

The first section of the Clayton bill interferes to a marked degree with the marketing of the unbranded class of commodities. The second section of the Clayton bill interferes in a similar degree with the marketing of branded commodities.

The first section of the Clayton bill provides in substance that the same commodity shall be sold by the dealer to all consumers at the same price, after making an allowance for transportation charges. That bill, unless some legislative provision could be made for equalizing the inequalities in the customers of dealers, could not possibly be carried into effect, even in the case of a little grocery store on the corner, and much less in the case of a large manufacturing concern. The groceryman has to equalize the inequalities of his customers by inequalities in price on the same commodities. Where one man's credit is unimpaired, and his bills are promptly paid and where he probably buys closer, studying the prices of similar commodities in all nearby stores, he gets better prices than the customer who is slow pay and who is unreliable, and until some means can be found to equalize these inequalities in customers or consumers it is impossible as a matter of practical business for the dealer to sell the same commodity at the same price to all his customers.

These two classes of commodities, branded and unbranded, have produced two rather distinct systems of salesmanship for marketing them.

ADVERTISING THE COMMODITY VS. ADVERTISING THE SELLER.

For instance, in marketing a trade-marked article, the aim of the proprietor is to advertise the commodity itself, as distinguished from advertising himself. His aim is, so to speak, to magnetize that particular commodity or to instill into it the advertising value he can produce.

In the case, for instance, of Sapolio, the article is magnetized with all the accumulated advertising which the proprietor has been able to generate by making, year in and year out, a good commodity, and by marketing it always at a uniform price, and by spreading its sale as widely as possible, and by advertising it widely over a long period of time in periodicals and elsewhere. This is what I call "public salesmanship."

WINDOW DISPLAY OF "DIANE OF THE GREEN VAN." ARRANGED BY E. H. DART, MANAGER OF THE BOOK DEPARTMFNT OF HAMBURGER & SONS OF LOS ANGELES

Now, in the sale of bulk or unbranded commodities, the advertising system is personal or private. There the aim is to advertise the dealer rather than the commodity.

THE "EVEN" OR NET PRICE.

The two systems of marking branded or trade-marked articles are what I term the "uneven price system" and the "even price system," and for the sake of brevity, I think I can develop my argument by first stating to the committee what I believe to be the disadvantages of the "uneven price system," and then setting forth some of the advantages of the "even price system."

By uneven and even prices I mean simply that under the uneven price system these trade-marked articles go forth into commerce and are sold at different prices by different dealers who make their own prices without regard to any price which may have been established by the originating proprietor.

The "even price system" is one wherein the proprietor, when he creates a trademarked article also fixes the even price at which the article is to be sold everywhere at retail by all dealers.

What I conceive to be the disadvantages of the uneven price system are, first, that uneven prices prevent a class of competition which might be described as "show-case" or "stock" competition.

When these trade-marked articles go into commerce the aim of the proprietor is to have every retailer carry his particular article in the show-case or on the stock shelves, and the aim of every other proprietor is to do the same, so that under a perfect system of distribution every retail store would have a complete stock of all the trade-marked articles in its line.

The result would be, for instance, that you could go into a hardware store and ask for a razor, and under perfect conditions of trade, the hardware dealer would have in stock a complete line of razors. He would take you to his razor show-case and you would have an opportunity to examine a razor out of every factory in the world. You would be able to examine razors ranging in price all the way from 25 cents to $7.50, to $10, or $15. This examination of a complete line of goods produces what I term "show-case competition."

You examine that entire line of razors, and the even or uniform price of each is marked on it. If you pick out one make of razor, you are fostering competition to the extent that you are patronizing that one factory. If you pick out another razor you are fostering competition by patronizing another factory.

CUT PRICES REALLY IMPAIR COMPETITION.

The first disadvantage of the system of uneven prices is that it prevents or impairs this show-case or stock competition. Uneven prices cut into the stock of some of the dealers, and makes the stock incomplete, so that when you go into a store to select a razor, there would be certain razors that probably had been driven out of the stock by reason of the fact that some department store or some cut-rate dealer has used that particular razor as a leader by probably cutting the price below the trade cost and selling it thus at a loss, and if this practice has been followed persistently enough, other dealers are forced to level down their prices below cost, and clear out their stock of those particular razors, and to that extent the stock of your dealer is incomplete. Uneven prices thus prevent or impair this effective form of show-case or stock competition.

THE BIG DEALER GIVEN THE ADVANTAGE.

The second disadvantage of this uneven price system is that it gives the big dealers an advantage over the little dealers. It tends to monopolize the sale of trade-marked articles in the hands of the dealers who are using those articles as leaders. The large dealers have the advantage of the quantity price; that is, they are able to buy articles in large quantities and at lower prices, and the advantage of the quantity price, added to the advantage of selling trade-marked articles at uneven prices as an advertising leader and thus driving these articles out of the show-cases of their smaller competitors, gives the large dealers a very great advantage.

Right on that point I wish to call your attention to the fact that there is a similarity in principle between this practice of department stores in using certain trade-marked lines as leaders, on the one hand, with the practice of a large oil company, which at one time was engaged, as is charged, in the practice of underselling the market in competing territory, and overcharging the market in non-competing territory. On the one hand we have the example of this oil company with a map of the United States spread out before it, divided up into states like a checker board, and playing the game of unfair competition. In one square it would lower the prices until competitors were put out of business, and in another square where it had no competitors it would charge enough to make up its losses in the competitive squares. In principle there is a very great similarity between that practice of the oil company and the practice of some department stores. In the case of the department store these various blocks of the checker board have been brought together and piled up into one great store which affords same chances of manipulation similar in principle to those of the oil company.

At one time the proprietor of the department store can conduct a campaign to injure his competitors in a particular line. For instance, he drops the prices in his china department; at the same time, in the other departments maintaining his prices sufficiently to make up the losses in his china department. This campaign could be kept up until he has injured his competitors in the china line. He will make the losses in one line always balance against the higher prices he will charge in another department. Now, that is one of the practices which is fostered by uneven prices in these trade-marked, and even in untrade-marked, commodities.

PROPERTY RIGHTS IMPAIRED OR CONFISCATED.

Another disadvantage of the system of uneven prices in trade-marked goods is that in effect it denies the right of ownership in that great class of trade-mark property which is created as the result of advertising and the carrying on of business with high standards.

The reason why the right of ownership in trade-mark property or good will is lost or impaired under the operation of the uneven price system is this: A man can not be said to own any property unless he has the right to prevent others from wantonly destroying it. In the case of my house, I would not consider that I had a very strong right or title of ownership unless I could prevent some other man from throwing a brick through my window or wantonly burning my house. Under this system of uneven prices for trade-mark goods we have almost a parallel case to that. A man spends his life developing a certain trade-mark article of which he is proud and into which he has put his best work and behind which he places his reputation and about which he spends money and time for advertising. As soon as that article is so magnetized with advertising value that it practically acts as its own salesman, one of the retailers engaged in the other system of private salesmanship gets the idea that he would like to draw some of that advertising value out of that article and unto himself. So he cuts the price on that article, perhaps, below the cost. He thus secures a great deal of advertising for himself. He advertises, for instance, that here is the Ingersoll watch which everybody knows is worth clearly $1, and I am selling it for 50 cents. He advertises himself by demagnetizing the Ingersoll watch of the advertising value which has been instilled into it by years of effort and expenditure.

NET PRICES NOT RESTRAINT OF TRADE.

In his letter to Mr. Byers Mr. Clark said:

It appears to me that the supporters of this reform have permitted themselves to be maneuvered into a wrong position. They have been put in a class with monopolists and restrainers of trade. This has been due somewhat to the fact that they have accepted the premises of those who oppose the principle of price maintenance. For instance, Mr. Patterson in his address says, "Unless I am entirely mistaken such a restraint upon trade as is involved in a price-maintenance agreement between a manufacturer and his customer may be well accepted, because it carries its own safeguard."

That is true; but why admit that price maintenance is a "restraint upon trade"? As a matter of fact, I believe the reverse is true. I believe it is more of a restraint on trade to prevent price maintenance than it is to permit price maintenance, because when price maintenance is prevented the ultimate market of the manufacturers is destroyed and their industries, as I show later, are demoralized, with the result that a restraint of trade which amounts, in effect, to a destruction of trade or confiscation of property is the result.

The supporters of price maintenance instead of permitting themselves to be classed with monopolists and restrainers of trade should insist that they are working for a reform which will strike from trade shackles which are now restraining it.

ERRONEOUS DEFINITIONS OF "COMPETITION."

The attitude of the courts and Congress is that competition between different retailers is what modern conditions demand. That is not the case. Retailers dealing in the same products from the same factories can not be expected to compete with each other without demoralizing trade any more than the different agents of a manufacturing concern located in different parts of the country could be expected to compete with each other in selling their own product. As a matter of fact, different retailers handling the same product from the same factory are in fact the agents of that factory, and should not be expected to compete in that article. A type of competition which is wanted is competition between manufactured articles made in different factories competing with each other on the ground of price or quality or characteristics or designs of the different articles.

Unless this principle is established, namely, that retailers handling the same article from the same factory are not competitors, but are agents of a common principal, the product of a factory can not be successfully marketed, and if it can not be successfully marketed it can not be successfully made If an article from one factory is offered at too high a pri e, the very retailers who handle it will have in stock an article for the same purpose from another factory which they will offer at a competing price.

NET PRICES SHOULD BE LEGALLY OBLIGATORY.

The courts and Congress have gotten strangely topsy-turvy on this question of price maintenance. As a matter of fact, instead of so making and interpreting the laws as in fact to compel different retailers dealing in the same article from the same factory to sell that article at different prices, so as to compete with each other, it would be more logical to pass a law making it unlawful to sell the same products from the same factory at different prices in different stores. We all remember the time when one of the worst industrial crimes charged against a certain large oil company was that it sold its product at different prices in different parts of the country; that at competing points it sold its oil by such low prices as to put its competitors out of business; and that, at the same time, at non-competing points it had sufficiently high prices to make up for the losses which it was sustaining in competition territory. This very industrial crime, which was charged so strenuously against this oil company some twenty years ago, contained the very condition which, in fact, the courts and the Congress are now trying to bring about. They are trying to force a condition where the same product made by the same machines in the same factory is to be sold at different prices in different retail establishments.

POINTS TO BE ESTABLISHED.

I am convinced that if this question is properly presented it can be established—

(1) That price maintenance instead of being a restraint of trade is a release of trade.

(2) That competition should be between the products of different factories, and not between retailers handling the same product from the same factory.

(3) That it would be more conservative and proper for Congress to pass a law making it unlawful to sell the output of a certain factory for different prices in different parts of the country than it is to bring about a condition wherein retailers are practically forced to sell the product of one and the same factory at different prices in different places, or even in the same place, thus legalizing the very device which has been used so frequently by large corporations in underselling their competitors at competing points and making up for their losses by raising the prices in non-competing territory.

(4) Retailers handling the same article from the same factory are not proper competitors, but are all agents of a common principal and should not be even permitted, much less required, to compete with each other by cut prices on the same article coming out of the same factory at the same wholesale price, any more than any other agents of the same concern should be expected or required to compete with each other in marketing the output of their common factory.

A TYPICAL INSTANCE OF PRICE-CUTTING.

In the course of his article in the Harvard Law Review Mr. Rogers said:

Take a common case of price cutting. An article of recognized merit has an established retail price fixed by the producer of it. It is extensively advertised. The price is known. It is a reasonable price or at least is believed to be by the public or it would not be paid. Under modern trade and advertising conditions articles must be nationally distributed. They must be in the hands of as many retail dealers as possible. The effect of an advertisement of a particular article is not lasting. It creates an immediate impulse to buy or it is of little use. For the advertiser to have a return on his advertising expenditure the potential purchaser must be able to obey the impulse while he has it. It must not be permitted to wear off. The price of the article must be stated so that the reade of the advertisement may know that it is within his means, but, most important of all, while he is in the notion he must be able to buy the thing at the time he want it at the first shop he sees. He must be made to feel that he can get it at one place as cheaply as another; otherwise he will shop around for a bargain and in the meantime he forgets; the impulse to buy that particular article has evaporated. Therefore, with national advertising, general distribution and uniform prices are indispensable. The retail dealer in such an article need make no effort to sell it. It sells itself. The producer's advertising sends purchasers to his store. The established price guarantees a profit. The dealer is merely an inactive conduit to get the article into the hands of the purchaser. He creates nothing; he need do nothing. His customers, as far as that particular advertised article is concerned, are sent to him by the producer.

HOW TRADE VALUE IS KILLED.

After the reputation and popularity of a nationally advertised and thoroughly distributed article are established everyone who knows the article knows its retail price. The consumer knows it as well as he knows the price of a dollar bill. A retail dealer then, for the purpose of attracting custom to himself, advertises and sells the article at a price conspicuously lower than the established and recognized price. Frequently this price is cost or below, the expectation being that any direct loss sustained will more than be made up by the value of the advertising received and in the sale at enhanced prices of other articles whose prices are not known. A dealer, for example, can well afford to sell for 69 cents a watch which is advertised by its producer as a dollar watch, and which everyone else in his town sells at a dollar, if he can, at the same time, sell for a dollar, a 50-cent chain, or give to the public the impression that he is able to sell everything he deals in 31 cents cheaper than anyone else. The public rushes to buy, not because a watch is advertised at 69 cents, but because a particular watch under a well-known trademark, which is known to be universally sold at a dollar and believed to be worth it, is offered by this particular dealer at 69 cents. In short, it is the utilization by the dealer of the goodwill of the producer that makes the situation possible at all. It is the localized goodwill of the producer in the community in which the retailer does business that makes cutting of prices on the producer's goods worth while. It is the knowledge of the public that the producer's goods are reputable and have the value which the producer has set upon them, by fixing the price that makes their sale at cut prices attractive. One cut-price sale invariably provokes others in retaliation. Where one dealer cuts the price of a dollar watch to 69 cents his neighbor, not to be outdone, advertises at 59 cents. Another then cuts to less, with the result that sooner or later, usually sooner, all the dealers in the community are forced to sell this particular watch at a price which yields no profit. The result is that purchasers are persuaded not to buy or to take an unknown article represented to be "just as good." The reputable and popular article is sold under protest or not at all. The local dealer who survives this competition is invariably a department store, or other concern of large resources, which can afford to do business for a time at a loss. The effect of a cut-rate war on the producer, whose well-advertised and reputable product was the subject of the first attack, is disastrous. Through no fault of his own he is deprived of the distribution of his goods in the community. His market is taken away from him for no reason except that his reputation is good and his products in demand, are of recognized value, and known to be worth the price he asks. His advertising expenditure is wasted because ineffective. Purchasers with the impulse to buy can not gratify it, and it is manifest that such conditions, if at all extensive, will ruin any business. The public are not benefited because, even if for a while they are able to get an article of recognized value at a cut price, soon they can not get it at all or only at great inconvenience.

The first step in this progress of destruction is the utilization, without permission, of the producer's goodwill for another's private gain, resulting in damage. The result is the same as if the producer's goodwill were taken away from him by fraud. The effect is identical as if the element of deception, as in ordinary cases of unfair competition, were present.

TITLE TO COMMODITIES PASS BUT BUSINESS REPUTATION IS ALSO A PROPERTY.

The opponents of efforts to fix and maintain prices invariably contend that where an article is purchased, title passes and control over it by the seller is gone; that it is the property of the purchasing dealer to do with as he pleases. This has long been the favorite argument of those who justify the perpetration of unfair trading by the use of personal names or by the deceptive use of other devices in which no exclusive right can be maintained. A man's name is undeniably his own property, but he is not permitted to use his own property, whether it be his personal name, or anything else he may own, in such a way as unnecessarily to cause damage to his neighbors. Ownership is not a license to injure another. Sixteen String Jack, whose operations on Houndslow Heath have made him immortal, doubtless owned the black mask and pistol which were the necessary tools of his occupation. A man with his own rifle may lawfully shoot at a target. He ought not in all conscience, however, to be permitted to pot his neighbors and defend on the ground that he owns the gun.

REMINISCENCES OF GEORGE HAVEN PUTNAM.

Mr. George Haven Putnam is planning to bring out in April under the title "Memories of My Youth," a volume of reminiscences covering the years 1844–65. Advance sheets of the book show that it tells, entertainingly, the story of the author's boyhood and youth, with digressions on certain events of the day that seemed to him especially significant.

The Putnam family, whose earlier name was Puttenham, had its English home in the County of Buckinghamshire—the earliest ancestor of whom Mr. Putnam finds record being Nicholas Puttenham, born in 1523. Among his ancestors Mr. Putnam claims one who took part in the Boston tea-party and the two General Putnams of the American Revolution.

George Haven Putnam was born in 1844, three years after his father, George Palmer Putnam, had migrated from the United States to London and established in Paternoster Row a branch of Wiley & Putnam. In 1848 the family (by this time consisting of five) returned to New York. Consequently, as Mr. Putnam writes, he was not old enough to even remember the interesting group of publishers with whom his father was associated, including John Murray the second, John the third (Johns fourth and fifth became personal friends of Mr. Putnam), Richard Bentley, "publisher to Her Majesty," Francis Rivington, Thomas Longmans, Edward Moxon, first publisher of Tennyson, Henry George Bohn, George Smith, Nicholas Trübner and Daniel Macmillan.

The return to the United States was brought about by a dissolution of the partnership between George Palmer Putnam and Mr. Wiley. Mr. Putnam believed there was a great opportunity for an American publisher to introduce the younger English authors to the American public, while Mr. Wiley held that in the existing state of the copyright laws any money spent in paying English authors and advertising their books would be wasted, since the "pirates" with their unauthorized editions might easily secure the larger share of the returns.

The first American home for the Putnam family was at Stapleton, Staten Island, then a place of sparsely settled, very beautiful woodland. Among the guests who were brought to the Putnam house during those early years Mr. Putnam recalls Miss Bremer, the Swedish authoress, Susan Warner, author of "The Wide, Wide World," Wendell Phillips, and Mr. Fabens, who published a little later, through the Putnam house, a book on the Isthmus of Panama, but who became fixed in the mind of the autobiographer not for this contribution to literature, but because he brought with him a small alligator, which became a pet of the Putnam family and the envy of the neighborhood. But one fine night friend alligator escaped from his washtub home and made for the open bay, where according to the awesome imaginings of the little Putnams, he no doubt grew big, forgot his early moral training and preyed upon sailormen and commuters. However, his reappearance was never chronicled in the morning papers, and by this time the waters about Staten Island are no doubt comparatively safe.

His own career as a publisher is not touched on in this volume, Mr. Putnam planning to continue his autobiography in a volume which will be entitled "Memories of a Publisher," but here and there in the early part of the present book are glimpses of his father's relations with writers who have taken honorable place in American literature. He recalls at one of his father's receptions the burly figure and broad face of Thackeray, and on the same evening remembers meeting "Louis XVII," who believed himself to be, and probably was, the son of Louis XVI. The evidence to this effect was the subject of a book published by the Putnams under the title "The Lost Prince."

When the family moved to Yonkers such people as Beecher, Curtis and Hale were often guests at their home. The home of Washington Irving, a few miles north of the Putnam cottage was frequently visited. Mr. Putnam recalls what Irving told him, one Sunday afternoon, of his own childhood, and of his meeting with General Washington.

At his father's office, where he was occasionally permitted to go between school days, George Haven Putnam secured at least an outside impression of some of the details of the publishing business, and obtained glimpses of such people as Cooper, Bayard Taylor and Mrs. Kirkland. He remembers hearing in 1852 some talk between his father, Mr. Bryant, Irenæus Prince and other leaders of the Copyright League in regard to a copyright treaty then in train in Washington. It was forty years, however, before an international copyright arrangement was made.

In 1857 came business troubles for the country at large and for the Putnam firm. The family moved to a cottage at Morrisania —a change which proved anything but disastrous to the children. Studies were kept up, and George Haven Putnam was able to come in to New York for school every day and incidentally to earn $300 toward his first student term at Göttingen.

Mr. Putnam writes entertainingly of daily happenings (such as the story of the alligator's career), and of more generally significant events—a chance meeting with Lincoln, or a visit to the great London exhibition of 1851. He tells of early voyages in sailing vessels, of travel on the Continent and of student days in Paris and Germany. The latter part of the book—perhaps half of it—tells of his Civil War days, describing the Red River Campaign, Shenandoah Valley, the Battle of Cedar Creek and prison experiences in Virginia. The volume is one that should attract the general reader as well as those particularly interested in the publishing world.

Mr. Putnam has already a long list of works to his credit, including "A Memoir of George Palmer Putnam," "A Prisoner of War in Virginia," "Abraham Lincoln," "The Censorship of the Church of Rome," "Books and their Makers During the Middle Ages," "Authors and their Public in Ancient Times," "The Question of Copyright," "The Little Gingerbread Man," "The Artificial Mother" and "Authors and Publishers."

NOTES FROM PARIS

Special correspondence to the London Bookseller and the New York Publishers' Weekly.

THE professional patriot is not regarded with much favor by the average Englishman, who, though ready to die for his native country, likes to grumble about her. Dr. Johnson, indeed, said that "Patriotism was the last refuge of a scoundrel," but the great lexicographer was in the habit of uttering astounding statements for the purpose of startling his hearers into contradicting him in order that he might get in one of his smashing blows. Boswell would have liked to have entered a mild protest, but he had been knocked out earlier in the evening, and no one else present evinced a desire to become a punching-bag—each thinking, perhaps, that it was one of the doctor's ponderous jests, or being secretly of the opinion of the modern bard that—

"He was but flesh, and flesh is grass;
At times, indeed, the greatest ass
Alive was Doctor Johnson."

At any rate, the remark was not true of Paul Déroulède, who died a few days ago at the age of sixty-seven. He was perfectly honest, and the only fault that can be brought against him was that he wanted to save his country in his own way, and was dead against all forms of patriotism which did not bear his own trademark. Had he been nothing more than a patriot there would have been no need to mention him here, but he was also a poet and dramatist. Literature was, however, only the second string to his bow, and his verses and plays display no extraordinary talent. He seems to have been aware of this, and, a few years after the Franco-Prussian war, begged the critics' leniency for one of his dramas on the ground that he had fought well for his country. Some of the critics, who had also a duty to perform, replied that "it was a bad rule that didn't work both ways" (a remark ascribed by an American humorist to Aristotle when he tried to double up a two-foot measure the wrong way of the hinge), and that it would be open to a general, after a crushing defeat, to plead that he was not much of a soldier, but a first-class poet.

His verses were popular with a certain section of the public, and, as always happens after the death of a well-known man, have been republished; also a life by Jerome et Jean Tharaud (Em. Paul), and a volume of what may be described as autobiographical and collected by H. Galli (Plon-Nourrit).

Another death I have to record is that of Hector Fleischmann. He poured forth volumes—of no great size, it is true—with astonishing rapidity, but he dealt with the seamy side of history; one does not know how much is fact and how much fiction in his stories of the love affairs of illustrious men.

Mr. Victor Giraud has written a couple of volumes of essays on the chief literary men of the day in "Les Maîtres de l'heure" (Hachette). They include studies on Loti, Brunetiere, E. Faguet, de Vogue, Lemaître, Ed. Rod, and Anatole France, and the effect of those writers on what is called "the French Renaissance," of which we heard a good deal a couple of years ago, but which appears to have been lying low for some time past.

This reminds me that the number of "Immortals" had fallen from the proper number of forty to thirty-six, owing to deaths, and last week three new members were elected, so that now the only arm-chair vacant is that of the much-regretted Jules Claretie. The three new Academicians are a dramatist, a philosopher, and a historian. M. Alfred Capus is the author of several well-known comedies distinguished for smart dialogue and acute observation of character. He is rather optimistic in tone, with that slight dash of cynicism which is inherent in the French character, and is seldom absent from any comedy of modern life. M. Henri Bergson has written several philosophic works, and his lectures at the Sorbonne attract many aristocratic hearers, who possibly do not understand half they hear: but it is an unwritten law that fashionable Paris shall always have its pet lecturer. M. Pierre de la Gorce has written the "History of the Second Republic" and the "History of the Second Empire"—monumental works which took up fifteen years of his life. He is now engaged on a "Religious History of the Revolution," and, though it might appear to the profane that there was very little to be said on that subject, he has already issued two portly volumes, and has two others on the stocks. To the general public his works are practically unknown, but he has done good work in his own line, and "Il n'y a pas de sots métiers."

That portion of a current French proverb has been adopted by M. Raymond Hesse as the title of a book, published by Ollendorff, on some of the out-of-the-way callings by which people make their living in Paris. The subject is an interesting one, and if it be true, as another proverb states, that one half the world does not know how the other half lives, M. Hesse's book ought to find plenty of readers. The proverb in full says, "There is no such thing as a foolish calling, but there are fools in every calling." If Mr. Hesse, or another, would write a book about the latter half of the proverb, what an immense field would be open to him.

Amongst the new novels there are two which, by their treatment of a rather original subject, merit some attention. "Le Baptême de Pauline Ardel," by Emile Baumann (Grasset), is the story of a young girl who has been brought up as a free-thinker, or, at least, has no religious training. As a matter of course, she falls in love with a young man who is an ardent believer, and the problem is which will convert, or pervert, the other. Domestic trials and her own reflections work a blessed change in her character, and eventually she "gets religion," is received into the Church, and finds a happiness which she did not discover in agnostic principles. There is not much in the story, but it is neatly told, and, at any rate, forms a change from the almost inevitable trio found in so many French novels.

"Gogo et Cie" is a very amusing story of snobbish bourgeois who think themselves pioneers of progress, preternaturally clever, and perfectly free from all prejudices. It is hardly necessary to say that they fall an easy prey to sharp but seedy adventurers and adventuresses, and their intended social reforms result in a heavy loss of money and prestige. M. Henry Rabusson, the author, seems to have studied his types from life, and he would not be badly advised to get some skilled dramatist to turn the book into a comedy.

Epinal is a town at the foot of the Vosges Mountains, and, though it has important manufacturers of cotton, machinery, and paper, is more celebrated for its "images" than anything else. They are not graven images, in the ordinary acceptation of that term, but are what used to be called broadsheets—that is to say, fly-sheets with one side covered with very roughly executed colored cuts. Generally there are twenty to thirty of these small blocks, each about the size of a couple of postage stamps, illustrating some highly moral story or nursery tale, with about three or four lines of text under each block to explain the artist's meaning. These images used to be very popular, but French children of the present day require something more artistic, and, though these fly-sheets may still be procured in Paris, it is very much to be doubted whether there is an extensive sale for them in towns or cities, though they may still have a fascination for the children of peasants in the rural districts. They are, however, not without interest to the historian, for they oftentimes, in bygone days, illustrated some now forgotten event or incident. M. René Perrout has been making researches amongst the printing-offices at Epinal, and has discovered some seventy-five sets of old blocks, some of them dating back to the beginning of last century. Whether the collection will have historical value remains to be seen when the volume is publishd—which will be in a few days' time—but, at all events, if it is of no use to paterfamilias, it will amuse the children.

LITERARY AND DRAMATIC FASHIONS.

What does the ordinary American, confident in his prejudices, suppose to be the ideas most often encountered just now in the pages of leading French novelists? They are, in fact, not at all, what we have been in the habit of attributing to the witty but wicked contemporary literature of France. A great reaction has set in, as Miss Winifred Stevens explains in detail in the Sociological Review. It is a revolt against both the old rationalism and the old looseness. Nature, virtue, religion—these are the words now coming into vogue. As one French writer puts it, God is "furiously in fashion" at this moment in France. By men like Charles Maurras and Maurice Barrès, all the talk is of Frenchmen getting rid of their irreligion, reverting to their "origins," whatever that may mean, becoming again "regional" instead of cosmopolitan, and gaining new courage, hope, and faith. And the minor writers are echoing the cry. Simple virtues and the observance of religious practices, with or without religious belief, have suddenly become the "mouvement" in France.

It would be pleasant, says a recent issue of the New York Evening Post editorially, if one could think of this as anything more than a literary fashion. Significant though it must be accounted, it yet remains mainly an affair of the writing classes. The mass of the people, the shopkeepers, the professional men, the workers, doubtless look at it with a certain amusement, but on the whole with indifference. It does not closely touch their lives—certainly does not alter them. They have seen these "mouvements" before, these passing styles in literature and in the morals which literary men preach. Reaction is merely a way of finding something new—or, at least different—to write about or to present in the theatre; and it is only a question of time when there will be reaction against the reaction. Not by such changing modes are the great tendencies of civilization determined, or the fundamental ideas of race and nation fixed.

At the same time, it is a great relief, for which tired readers and theatre-goers will give much thanks, to discover that a reaction has indeed set in against the grossness, the indecencies, and the sex-obsessions which have for the past two or three years been inundating current literature and the stage. Those whose business it is to stand as watchmen, not only to tell us what of the night, but to govern their own publishing business by the signs of the times which they detect, are very positive in reporting the impending change. That veteran diagnostician of the taste of magazine-readers, Mr. S. S. McClure, says that the sex-story, the sex-problem, is rapidly going out. It will soon be in the limbo where corporation muck-raking fell some time since. What will take the place which brothels and white slavery have been holding in periodical literature, as in the drama, does not clearly appear as yet. It would not be strange if we reacted strongly for a time to the simple life. We could put up with it gratefully, if only as a pleasing contrast. To get a breath of fresh air, to be given a view of nature, would be such a novelty that the crowd might be found running after it. Melodramas, in which the heroes and heroines should have the old incredible perfection of homely virtues; spectacles in which rural simplicities and innocencies should be held up to praise; plays in which goodness and sweetness should be the note—even the return of peasants and shepherdesses—might easily become the fashion. In fact, there are some indications that they will. When we once take to reacting, we do the business thoroughly. If we tire of the Tuileries, there is no stopping short of the Little Trianon.

Pascal observed that moral standards change with every ten degrees of latitude. Unhappily, they seem to change every ten years within the same degree of latitude. But this is mainly because the young and ardent devotees of each new fashion in literature or in morals will argue gravely that they have at last hit upon the eternal principle for which the whole creation has been groaning until they appeared. This has been eminently true of the sex-madness of certain writers and playwrights during the past few months. Their work has been offensive to wholesome minds, but it has been made additionally offensive by their calm assumption that they had at last discovered the way to make literature "vital," and the stage a mirror of life and a school of morals. Amiable but deceived, they are now in a fair way to make the true discovery about their wonderful "movement"—namely, that it was but a temporary fashion which will soon be regarded as hopelessly démondé.

We hope that no reader will imagine that it is here intended to maintain that nothing is new and nothing is true and that it doesn't matter. It matters immensely. Take the very kind of discussion and exploitation of the evils of life which have been current these months past. Doubtless, they have left a residuum of good. If nothing else, we have acquired from it all a deepened sympathy and pity. But the thing has also unquestionably given most sane people the sensation of a bad taste in the mouth. It is a fashion that, fortunately, is passing and, as we turn to the future, we may trust that hereafter more emphasis will be placed, not only upon the things that are true, even if unpleasant, but also upon those that are lovely and of good report.

DEATH KNELL OF SEX LITERATURE.

"THE public is getting tired of having 'sex' eternally dinned into its ears," S. S. McClure is reported to have said at a recent lecture in Chicago. "People are tired of the muck-rake, too. What readers want now is a little of the good old-style fiction that writers have found it hard to sell recently and special articles along uplift lines that are at once interesting and constructive. I predict confidently that within a few months sex problem stories and series will be banished from the pages of reputable magazines.

"We'll keep the muck-rake behind the door, though, for we may have to use it again. But at present it has done its work. The public has been aroused to the need of many reforms, and other agencies than the magazines and other tools than the rake are successfully campaigning against the evils.

"America is immeasurably ahead of England and her dependencies in the publication of literature," Mr. McClure went on. "However, we are far behind the peoples of Continental Europe in the field. The poets and fiction writers of France and Germany, and perhaps Italy, are producing matter which is far superior to that offered in the best books and magazines of our own land.

"Poetry is in a state of decadence in this country at present, it would seem. Why, I am not sociologist enough to determine. Thousands of persons in America are able to write verse which will scan, but the souls of poets must inhabit the bodies of illiterates these days, since we find so little poetry in our verse.

"The magazine field is overcrowded at present. A readjustment will undoubtedly take place, and many of the smaller publications will be forced to the wall. The Munsey, Curtis, Everybody's, McClure's and Popular companies are gaining control of many of the publications which were formerly independent. This means that if one of the magazines does not pay it will merely be retired from the field, and there will be no crash. In this connection it is interesting to note that twenty-one years ago all of the magazines in the country had a total circulation of only 1,250,000 monthly. Now the circulation of the magazines is twenty times that number."

COPYRIGHT MATTERS.

AMENDMENT REGARDING DEPOSIT COPIES PASSES SENATE.

THE amendment to the Copyright Law, already noted in the PUBLISHERS' WEEKLY (January 31, 1914), providing for the deposit of but one copy of foreign works, on which copyright is sought, passed the Senate March 24th. It now awaits only the signature of the President to become law.

THE NEW ZEALAND ACT.

THE new New Zealand copyright act goes into effect next Wednesday. The complete text of the law, now available, shows that it follows closely in phraseology the British imperial copyright law, rather than the briefer act of its sister dominion, Australia. Indeed the New Zealand law may be described as, for the most part, a verbatim transcript of the imperial code, with such slight textual changes as were necessitated and some few changes in the administrative provisions of the law, and the forms of procedure specified.

DODGE PUBLISHING COMPANY ABSORBS H. M. CALDWELL COMPANY.

COINCIDENT with the sale of Dana Estes & Company last week to the Page Company, the affiliated organization, the H. M. Caldwell Company, was sold to the Dodge Publishing Company of New York City.

In taking over the business of the H. M. Caldwell Company, the Dodge Publishing Company plan to keep the line distinct from their other publications. The stock is being rapidly moved from Boston to New York and all orders will be promptly filled from the Dodge Publishing Company's offices at 214-220 East 23d Street. The Caldwell line will be shown to the trade, with many new bindings and new publications, by Mr. A. D. MacMullen, who is so favorably known throughout the booktrade. Mr. MacMullen, is planning to start at once on a trip through the South and Pacific Coast.

Mr. H. M. Caldwell, president and manager of the H. M. Caldwell Company since the corporation was formed in 1896, will have charge of the sales department and aid in designing the Caldwell line. There are few men better known to the buyers in the large book stores than "Bert" Caldwell, and certainly none more popular. In 1910 Messrs. Dana Estes & Company purchased a controlling interest in the H. M. Caldwell Company and owing to their desire to retire from the publishing field they accepted the offer of the Dodge Publishing Company for the plates and stock of the Caldwell Company. In addition to his duties in connection with the H. M. Caldwell Company, Mr. Caldwell acted as sales and advertising manager, as well as foreign representative for Dana Estes & Company. In his new position Mr. Caldwell will have ample opportunity to bring to the Caldwell line that wealth of knowledge in designing that has in the past made the Caldwell publications so popular.

OBITUARY NOTES.

W. A. TAPLEY, for over thirty-five years in the employ of the W. A. Wilde Company, died at his home at Roxbury, Mass., on Thursday March 26th. Mr. Tapley was one of the oldest book men on the road.

LITERARY AND TRADE NOTES.

THE GROWING literature of baseball will be shortly increased by a volume of Big League stories by Ty Cobb, which Edward J. Clode will publish under the title "Busting 'Em."

Cambrian Gleanings is the title of a new monthly magazine devoted to Welsh matters. It will be conducted by Henry Blackwell, the well-known collector of Welsh books, whose business address is University Place and Tenth Street, New York City.

"GLORY OF THE PINES" is the title of a new novel by William Chalmers Covert, D.D., which the Westminster Press will publish. It tells of a parish among the pines of Northern Michigan, and of Glory Garvin. The story is said to be founded on fact, but to read like fiction.

THE PAGE COMPANY announce for publication in the spring a new book on Bulgaria and Macedonia by Prof. Will S. Monroe, author of "Bohemia and the Cechs," etc. The work will cover the country in practically every aspect, and special chapters will deal with the recent wars in the Balkans and the Balkan problems.

"PRISONS AND PRISONERS," by Lady Constance Lytton and Jane Warton, Spinster, is a book of immediate interest—the vivid impressions and experiences of one who was imprisoned four times, first as a lady of title, and afterwards as Jane Warton, Spinster. George H. Doran Company are the American publishers.

MARY HEATON VORSE'S novel "The Heart's Country," to be published April 22d, by the Houghton Mifflin Company, seems almost certain to be a success—its title promises romance, its author promises humor—a combination well pleasing to every novel reader. The illustrations, just the sort for such a story, are by Alice Barber Stephens.

THE CENTURY COMPANY will issue in the near future "Practical Homemaking," a textbook for young housekeepers, by Mabel Hyde Kittredge, President of the Association of Practical Housekeeping Centers of New York City. The "Homemaking" of the title is well chosen. It suggests an art, of which "housekeeping" is but the mechanical foundation.

A NEWCOMER to Little, Brown & Company's list of authors is Bertrand W. Sinclair, whose name is well known to magazine readers and who is the author of "The Land of Frozen Suns," and other novels. "North of Fifty-three," 'his new book' to be published early in April, a story of the Canadian Northwest, an environment well known to Mr. Sinclair, tells the love story of a man of the wild and a girl of the city.

THE PUTNAMS have in train for publication in April a "History of Connecticut," by George L. Clark, author of "Silas Deane: A Connecticut Leader in the American Revolution." Mr. Clark has written a history in the fullest and best sense of the term. He has recorded not only the events of battle and statesmanship, but he has also traced the great forces at work affecting the daily life of the people and giving the state its character.

FIVE COMPANIES of players have been playing "Little Lost Sister" for a season in the principal cities of this country, accordingly Gazzolo & Ricksen, of Chicago, have been encouraged to publish the story as a book, the form, indeed, in which its author, Virginia Brooks, originally planned to issue her work. The story is of a girl innocently lured into a house of ill-fame. The Hamming Publishing Company, of Chicago, are the publishers.

A SCRIBNER SERIES which promises to become standard, has been prepared by John C. Van Dyke under the title "New Guides to Old Masters." These twelve little volumes of which seven are ready and five in press are descriptive and critical art guides to the European galleries, composed of notes on the important pictures of each gallery. The author is Professor of the History of Art at Rutgers College, and author of various works on art subjects.

DOUBLEDAY, PAGE & CO. announce that they have just published biographical booklets about Conrad and Booth Tarkington which they will be glad to send free to those interested in these authors. They also announce a unique gift in connection with "My Garden Doctor." To buyers of this book they will be glad to send from their gardens at the Country Life Press, seeds of Viola tricolor Trimardeau, a particularly beautiful pansy, mentioned in the story.

THE AMERICAN MAN who wants to know how he looks on the Stock Exchange, the American woman who craves to be told how her fashionable garments look to a foreigner, will find this and much other information in Wu Tingfang's "America Through the Spectacles of an Oriental Diplomat," a Stokes publication. The book is not heavy, and is truly kindly in tone, but whoever reads it will realize what a strange place the United States is, and what very peculiar people we are after all.

THE NEW SOLANO SYSTEM of physical training is based on simple though tried and approved scientific principles, free from fad and easily adapted to the peculiar needs of the individual or class. No elaborate or expensive apparatus is needed. The tables of exercises are supplemented with recreative games and increase logically and gradually from simple to more complex movements. The Bobbs-Merrill Company have just published E. John Solano's "Physical Training —Junior Course" and "Physical Training —Senior Course."

NOW THAT THE golf clubs are coming out, it becomes the bookseller's duty to provide instruction in that game for both novices and advanced players. George W. Jacobs & Company have ready James Braid's "Advanced Golf," containing advice that should turn a fair player into a good player (or perhaps a champion—who knows?) and on May 9th will publish a new edition of Harry Vardon's "How to Play Golf," which begins at the very foundation, instructing the beginner in the golf language (in a technical sense, of course) and providing him with all other information he needs, both for the first steps and for advanced golf.

NOW IS THE time to begin plans for a vegetable salad to be served next summer—a salad made from products grown right there in the garden. The Orange Judd Company have just published "The Home Vegetable Garden," a practical and suggestive guide for the man who wants to raise his own vegetables. Written by a practical gardener of long experience, its instructions about varieties, making the garden, caring for it, and securing the largest returns, can be accepted as absolutely accurate and up-to-date. Every phase of garden-making is considered. It is a book for the beginner and the small home gardener particularly, but will be especially serviceable also to commercial gardeners.

AN EXHIBIT of the "Better Books of a Year," with original manuscripts and illustrations, opened last week in the spacious auditorium on the sixth floor of the Bamberger Store, Newark, N. J., under the auspices of the Publishers' Co-operative Bureau of New York. About 1,500 volumes, representing the better books of twenty-five leading publishers, are shown in this exhibit. The display is a very effective one. A supplementary exhibit, planned simply to direct attention to the main exhibit in the Bamberger auditorium, is being displayed in the reading room of the Newark Free Library. Indeed, one of the very interesting features in connection with this exhibit in a Newark store is the splendid cooperation shown by the local library and its branches.

AN INTERESTING illustration of the way the bookseller has his finger on the pulse of the times is given in a recent issue of the Publishers' Circular, which reports the significant news from Mr. W. Erskine Mayne, the well-known bookseller, of Belfast, that he has sold many hundreds of copies of handbooks on military training, signaling, shooting, etc., and several times has been unable to cope with the demand, and that other Protestant booksellers are having the same experience. Mr. Mayne says that in addition to the purely military handbooks he is selling more than

1,000 copies weekly of the British Red Cross Society's Manuals, as "our matrons and maidens of every station in life are devoting all their spare time to attending ambulance and nursing classes."

VOLUME I of "The Standard Cyclopedia of Horticulture," by Prof. L. H. Bailey has just come from the Macmillan Company. It covers the letters A and B, so we may now grow apples and blue-bells according to the best scientific methods. It will not be long, however, before zinnias will flourish in our gardens, for the six volumes which will compose the work will come from the press as rapidly as manufacturing conditions will permit. This is not merely a revised edition of Bailey's old "Cyclopedia" but really a new work from start to finish with much new matter both in the way of text and illustrations, while even the old matter that has been retained has been rewritten. It has, of course, been reset throughout.

JOHN J. WOOD, President of the Burrows Brothers Company, of Cleveland, O., took advantage of the western visit of Miss Leona Dalrymple, author of "Diane of the Green Van," by arranging a reception in her honor at the Burrows Brothers' store. Nearly two hundred people were present, including a number of writers and prominent educators. The big staircase in the middle of the store was attractively banked with ferns and flowers, and an orchestra was stationed in the balcony. Refreshments were served, and altogether the affair was quite a society function. Miss Dalrymple made a brief address, referring to some of her amusing experiences since she became known as a prize winner. Mr. Wood did not forget to give "Diane" an elaborate window display during the week—a display in which rhymes, placards and a large van had part. It is Mr. Wood's intentions to give similar receptions to well-known authors from time to time.

THE SAALFIELD PUBLISHING COMPANY have just issued a notable addition to Napoleonana in a two-volume work entitled "Historical Papers Upon Men and Events of Rare Interest in the Napoleonic Epoch." The author, Joseph Hepburn Parsons, has spent years of close research in the great libraries of the world, gathering from this and that authority some fact, some tragedy, some comedy on that dramatic quarter of a century from 1789 to 1815. He believes that the necessary condensations of general history suppress so much that we are deprived of all save the bare outlines of even the greatest events of this epoch. Biography, it is true, does supply the details, but for the general reader biographies are not read, because of their very volume. He has, therefore, endeavored in these Papers to shed a more intimate light than history gives on some of the most interesting persons and events of that immortal period and to introduce those smaller, more intimate details of fact, of letters of authentic anecdote which endow history with its more human interest and which lend to biography its peculiar charm.

Alden, Carroll Storrs. George Hamilton Perkins, Commodore, U. S. N.; his life and letters. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. 13+302 p. il. pors. O. $1.50 n.

Commodore Perkins's career was picturesque and adventurous in the extreme. He served with Farragut in some of the most notable naval engagements of the war; he was one of the two officers sent ashore to demand the surrender of New Orleans; and he was in command of the monitor "Chickasaw," which had the most conspicuous part in the Battle of Mobile Bay. After the war Commodore Perkins held various important commands and cruised to many different parts of the world. Sstory is told mainly in letters.

Bronson, Edg. Beecher. The vanguard. N. Y., Doran. c. 316 p. D. $1.25 n.

Corporal Stocking, famous mine and coach guard, is the hero. Author has amplified his tale from Stocking's own notes. Describes the share that California troops took in the Civil War; their struggle with the Navajos and Apaches who tried to take advantage of the war and loot the settlements. The war over, Corporal Stocking went back to his free roving; guarding the Deadwood coach, trapping in Canada, facing bad men in the streets of Arizona towns where he served as deputy sheriff till times got peaceful and therefore dull; captaining the Leiter mine guard at Leadville, and at last settling down in a rose-covered cabin near Los Angeles, with the girl he had known back in his boyhood days among the lumber camps of Michigan.

Bruce, H: Addington Bayley. Adventurings in the psychical. Bost., Little, Brown. c. 7+318 p. D. $1.35 n.

Reviews the results of modern psychical research in the realm of the abnormal and the seemingly supernormal. Makes clear their bearings on the nature and possibilities of mankind, and contributes something towards a wider knowledge of the progress science is making in revealing the real causes of such phenomena. Brings out the exceedingly practical character of many of these discoveries, by which the world has been a rich gainer. Chapter headings indicate in some measure the scope of the work: Ghosts and their meanings; Why I believe in telepathy; Clairvoyance and crystal-gazing; Automatic speaking and writing; Poltergeists and mediums; The subconscious; Dissociation and disease; The larger self, etc.

Bryan, G: Sands, comp. and ed. The camper's own book. N. Y., Log Cabin Press, 146 Worth St. 194 p. il. 12°, $1; pap., 50 c.

Cervesato, Arnaldo. The Roman Campagna; tr. by Louise Caico and Mary Dove. Bost., Small, Maynard. '13. 395 p. il. 8°, $5 n.

Child, Georgie Boynton. The efficient kitchen; definite directions for the planning arranging and equipping of the modern labor-saving kitchen; practical book for the home-maker; ed. and arr. by Louise Boynton. N. Y., McBride, Nast. c. 13+242 p. il. diagrs. tabs. D. $1.25 n.

Written to answer the question of the practical home maker who desires to put her housekeeping on a modern basis. Without going into theory, it tells practically how to eliminate waste and thus lower the cost of living. The adaption of labor-saving inventions to the needs of everyone, prices of household equipment, comparative merits and directions for installing, are some of the practical phases of this guide to an ideal system of meeting the housekeeping problem. Index.

Clarke, Isabel Constance. The secret citadel. N., Y., Benziger. c. 416 p. D. $1.35 n.

Tells of a young Catholic wife and her Protestant husband and how through her love he is finally brought into her church, though first they go through a time of sore trial.

Cleveland, Catherine Lucy Wilhelmina, Duchess of. The life and letters of Lady Hester Stanhope; by her niece the Duchess of Cleveland; with a prefatory note by the Earl of Roseberry. [N. Y., Scribner.] 9+468 p. il. O. $6 n.

"In view of the variety of publications concerning Lady Hester Stanhope, it has seemed well to members of her family that the book written by her niece, and privately circulated, should now be given to the public as the authoritative biography of this strange woman." Lady Hester Stanhope traveled unchaperoned through Europe, a fact which, taken with her various love affairs, made her a conspicuous figure in her day. Index.

Dixon, W: Scarth. Hunting in the olden days. Bost., Small, Maynard. '13. il. 4°, $7.50 n., bxd.

Echegaray y Eizaguirre, José. Mariana; tr. by Federico Sarda and Carlos D. S. Wuppermann. N. Y., A. & C. Boni. c. '09, '14. 157 p. S. 75 c. n.

Eucken, Rudolf Christof. Can we still be Christians?; tr. by Lucy Judge Gibson. N. Y., Macmillan. c. 218 p. D. $1.25 n.

Answers the question asked in title emphatically in the affirmative. We not only can, but must, still be Christians provided "Christianity be recognized as a progressive, historical movement still in the making, that it be shaken free from numbing influence of ecclesiasticism and placed upon a broader foundation."

Faguet, Emile, i. e. August-Emile. Initiation into philosophy; tr. from the French by Sir Home Gordon. N. Y., Putnam. 10+254 p. D. $1.25 n.

Planned for the beginner giving a rapid sketch of the history of philosophy from the time of Thales down to the last century, a few sentences bringing out the keynote of the teaching of each school and the main lines of each philosopher's thought.

Fenollosa, Mary McNeill, [Mrs. Ernest F. Fenollosa, "Sidney McCall," pseud.] Ariadne of Allan Water; with front. by C. H. Taffs. Bost., Little, Brown. c. 414 p. D. $1.35 n.

Story opens in Virginia, later scenes shift to The Hague and London. Ariadne finds herself as a result of her father's unwise will and her stepmother's subsequent marriage to an adventurer in a most difficult situation. If she leaves her stepmother the latter will be penniless, so the husband gets money fron Ariadne whenever he wants it and she is dragged about Europe wherever they wish to go. Seven tragic years go by in this way, but at last the girl is free and may take the happiness she has refused so long.

Ffoulkes, C: The armourer and his craft. Bost., Small, Maynard. '13. il. pls. 4°, $15 n., bxd.

Fitzgerald, Percy Hetherington. Memories of Charles Dickens; with an account of Household Words and All the Year Round, and of the contributors thereto. [N. Y., Scribner]. 14+383 p. il. pors. facsims. Q. $5 n.

Book is by the only person living who was an intimate friend of Dickens and closely connected with his literary work. He gives a series of domestic pictures of Dickens, showing him as the man rather than the writer, before taking up his connection with Household Words and All the Year Round. Portion of book is devoted to the leading contributors to these journals. Index.

Flint, E: Du Bois. The garden patch. N. Y., J: Lane. c. '12. 87+2 p. tabs. S. 50 c. n.

Information concerning all kinds of vegetables, their origin, when, where and how to plant, and whether in the delicate or hardy class. Pests of the vegetable world are discussed, as well as irrigation, manures, plant foods, crossing, etc.

Forman, H: Ja. London, an intimate picture. N. Y., McBride, Nast. c. '13. 3+216 p. il. D. (Blue books of travel) $1.25 n.

Fowler, Ellen Thorneycroft, ["Mrs. A. L. Felkin."] Her ladyship's conscience. N., Y. Doran. c. '13. 8+311 p. D. $1.25 n.

By author of "Concerning Isabel Carnaby." Tells of Lord Westerham's love for Lady Esther Wyvern and her refusing to marry him because she is forty and he twelve years younger. She invites her beautiful, selfish cousin to stay with her and throws her in Westerham's way with the result that he falls in love with Beryl and marries her, only to discover her shallow selfishness does not fill his life as Esther's sweetness and goodness coud have. There is abundance of witty dialogue in the story's telling and a happy ending, which comes, as it should, just when things seem most impossible for the hero and heroine.

Frary, Fs. Cowles. Laboratory manual of glass-blowing. N. Y., McGraw-Hill, 1914. c. 7+60 p. il. 12°, 75 c.

Gillmore, Rufus Hamilton. The opal pin. N. Y., Appleton. c. 318 p. il. D. $1.35 n.

Two young men appear in Boston society at about the same time. Both win their way into the best circles; each is believed by a few to be Lord Bellmere, incognito. Both pay ardent court to Hilda Cabot, complications increase, leading up to a scene in which each suitor accuses the other of being an impostor, and the police enter. Throughout the story an opal pin passes from hand to hand, bringing misfortune upon whomever possesses it.

Gordon, Ernest Barron. The anti-alcohol movement in Europe. N. Y. and Chic., Revell. c. 333 p. diagrs. 8°, $1.50.

Gribble, Fs. i. e. Fs. H: The life of the Emperor Francis Joseph. N. Y., Putnam. 20+363 p. il. pors. O. $3.75 n.

There is no house in Europe whose annals are richer in incident and eccentricity than those of the House of Hapsburg. Book tells of the political maneuvers of the Emperor and his ministers; of the romance and scandal of the court; of the indiscretions of Louisa of Tuscany; of John Orth and the Order of the Golden Fleece; of Herr Wulfling and Fräulein Adamovics. Pictures the skill with which Francis Joseph has constantly extricated his country from embarrassments with rival powers and succeeded in keeping the peace between his little dependencies. Index.

Hall, Edn. Herb. College laboratory manual of physics. Cambridge, Mass. Harvard Univ. c. 8+138 p. il. diagrs. 12°, $1.80.

Halliburton, W: Dobinson, M.D. The essentials of chemical physiology; for the use of students. 8th ed. N. Y., Longmans. 11+324 p. il. col. pl. diagrs. tabs. O. $1.50 n.

Hamilton, Franklin. The cup of fire. N. Y., and Cin., [Meth. Bk. Concern] c. 382 p. D. $1.50 n.

Theme is taken from the reference in the Book of Esdras to a "cup of fire" and is an idealistic study of spiritual verities. Some of the material has already appeared in various religious journals.

Hardy, Rev. E: J: Still happy though married. N. Y., Scribner. 353 p. D. $1.50 n.

Writer holds that marriage is no laughing matter; that the only thing more serious than to be married is not to be married. And this is no apology for matrimony but a protest for condemning it without trying it. In fact, its thirty-nine chapters, embodying the observations and experience of almost as many years, might be called author's thirty-nine articles of faith in matrimony; for it was thirty years ago that his earlier views, "How to be happy though married," were first read with twinkling eyes by the reading public.

Higginson, Mary Potter Thacher, [Mrs. T: Wentworth Higginson]. Thomas Wentworth Higginson; the story of his life. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. 10+435 p. (30 p. bibl.) il. pors. O. $3 n.

Intimate biography by his wife, giving for the first time the full story of the life of one of the most interesting of American soldiers and writers. In youth a romantic poet, Mr. Higginson became in early life a Unitarian clergyman of power and effectiveness. Later, in command of the first colored regiment raised for service in the Civil War, he had some military experiences of exceptional interest. In later life, as a many-sided man of letters, his relations with writers in both England and America were extraordinarily close and various. Work is fully documented, and one of its interesting features is the correspondence with many notable figures printed here for the first time. Book is illustrated from portraits, views of Colonel Higginson's homes, friends, etc., and with facsimiles of interesting manuscripts. Index.

McCarthy, Justin Huntly. Fool of April. N. Y., J: Lane. c. '13. 419 p. D. $1.35 n.

A comparatively insignificant man becomes suddenly possessed of wealth by an eccentric will, the terms of which stipulate that he is to spend a certain sum during one year and to "see life" as a society man, for which purpose a young nobleman is chosen by the testator as his coach. Author treats his subject divertingly, gives a realistic picture of how the life of the gay world would appear to the eyes of a plain-living, routine-loving business man, and makes us like his kind-hearted little hero. Ending of the story is in the nature of a surprise.

Tale of the St. Lawrence involving a gang of international smugglers. Both hero and heroine are secret agents of the government, Cranford to earn luxuries somewhat at the price of his self-respect, Diana to make amends for the crimes of her father and brother. They meet and fish off Pidgin Island which the girl knows is to be the scene of a smuggling venture, while Cranford at first thinks only of sport, then the girl fills his thoughts and then a desperate gang of criminals give him plenty of excitement. Of course in the end love and virtue triumph.

Chronicle of the Rutherglen family, father, mother and two daughters, Effie and Millie. None of them have any real affection for each other, each of the girls is only seeking her own ease and comfort, things hard to attain in the house of their coarse selfish father and shallow mother: Milly marries a rich neighbor while Effie carries on love affairs with two men, her ingrained insincerity and lack of truth making it impossible for her to break with the one she no longer cares for. An accident clears her path and we leave her happy with the man she prefers.

One year of Pierrot; by the mother of Pierrot. N. Y., Putnam. c. 2+364 p. D. $1.35 n.

Pierrot's father died before he was born and his mother wanted to die until she heard her baby's cry; then she fought to live. Little Mother wrote down everything in order not to lose even one quick second of her experience—just one big, fine year with Pierrot, then he was taken from her. But all her life was glorified—she had been the mother of Pierrot. She tells of all her friends among the peasants of her home in southern France and of the young American who won his lady love through Pierrot.

Packard, Fk. Lucius. The miracle man. N. Y., Doran. c. 300 p. D. $1.25 n.

"Doc" Madison, a clever crook, reads in a newspaper about an old man in a Maine village who is a faith healer. He immediately sees possibility of using the Patriarch, as he is called, for the profit of the group of crooks he leads. Helena, the Flopper, and "Pale-Face Harry" all go to Maine, the girl posing as the Patriarch's lost grand-niece, the others experiencing miraculous cures which, judiciously reported, soon bring many people to Needley whom the simple goodness and faith of the Patriarch really cure and who pour money upon the "Shrine." By degrees each of the moral pirates comes under the influence of the fine old man and their reformation is his greatest triumph.

Series of papers intended to shed a more intimate light upon some of the most interesting persons and events of the Napoleonic era. In many cases the words of the actors themselves are given, taken from their own written account of events or from some contemporary's record. Robespierre, the surrender of the Knights of St. John of Jerusalem, Gustavus Adolphus IV of Sweden, the Legion of Honor, the Code Napoleon, are a few of the persons and events discussed.

Perry-Ayscough, H. G. C., and Otter-Barry, R. B. With the Russians in Mongolia; with a preface by Sir Claude Macdonald; il. with 50 photographs and a map. N. Y., J: Lane. 22+344 p. tabs. O. $4.50 n.

Besides being a record of travel in a practically unknown country, book is an observant account of the lives and characters of the inhabitants. Describes the latest developments in the drama recently enacted in this far eastern corner of the world. The agreement signed in November, 1913, by Russia and China involves Mongolia deeply, as is clearly shown in these pages, for she seizes her opportunity thereby to free herself from the yoke of China and to declare an autonomous government under Russian protection. Petre, Fs. Loraine. Napoleon at bay, 1814. N. Y., J: Lane. 11+219 p. fold. maps and plans in pocket. O. $2.50 n.

Fifth of the author's studies of Napoleonic campaigns, shows Napoleon after the disastrous campaign in Germany, left to stand at bay in defence of a sovereignty reduced by the natural limits of the Rhine, the Alps and Pyrenees. His two months' war with the armies of Bohemia and Silesia in Champagne is described in this volume. Notwithstanding the mistakes into which the general was forced by the ambitions of the statesman, the campaign of 1814 was a wonderful effort of Napoleon's genius, contending as he was against overwhelming odds. Volume is the first in English to give an account of the campaign. Index.

Pier, Arth. Stanwood. The women we marry. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. 8+375 p. D. $1.35 n.

Love affairs of two men and two women, before and after marriage, of estrangement and reconciliation, of the readjustment of love through the coming of children. It is hard for a young husband and wife to modify the preferences and prejudices which formed so strong a factor in their individual lives, and to realize that these preferences and prejudices have so little real meaning to the other. This difficulty presents itself to the Rapallos on their honeymoon. Their attempt to solve it leads to unforseen complications, not only in their lives, but also in the lives of their friends. Scene is laid in Europe and in Boston.

Hero is a big, broad-minded, healthy, happy man, whose home is in the wide, unpeopled spaces north of Fifty-three. Into this country comes a girl from the city, who views the world from an entirely different angle. Loving her, he sets himself the task of removing from her eyes the scales of conventionality, but finds himself drawn into the maelstrom of business. His ideals are contrary to the usual methods of finance and he returns to his north-land. How the girl and himself are affected by their experiences, what changes take place in their viewpoints, make the main theme of the story.

Somerville, H. B. Ashes of vengeance; a romance of old France. N. Y., McBride, Nast. 356 p. D. $1.25 n.

Romance, adventure and chivalry in the stormy days of France just following the massacre of St. Bartholomew. Between two representatives of rival houses a bitter enmity exists, having been handed down as a heritage. How one nobleman obtained bodily possession of the other, making him a feudal slave, how each man in this strange position learned the worth of the other, how a haughty, beautiful woman stood between them, and how out of the ashes of vengeance, the blossom of love arose, is told in a story marked by heroic deeds and tender sentiment.

Victor, (The) book of the opera; stories of one hundred operas with 500 il. and descriptions of one thousand Victor opera records. [Rev. ed.] Camden, N. J., Victor Talking Machine Co. c. '13. 480 p. 12°, $1.

Walling, W: English. Progressivism—and after. N. Y., Macmillan. c. 35+406 p. D. $1.50 n.

In the political events of the last few years Mr. Walling sees much that is significant not only for the present but for the future. What the progress of affairs in the next generation is to be he outlines in this work. Of particular interest are his analyses of President Wilson, Colonel Roosevelt and other prominent leaders, while his description of that which has been and that which is to come is keen. Index.

Wemyss, Mary C. E., [Mrs. G: Wemyss]. Grannie. N. Y., Macmillan. c. 302 p. D. $1.35 n.

Grannie is an utterly delightful old lady who thoroughly understands that while it was her duty to bring up her children, it is her privilege to spoil her grandchildren. She writes a book in which she tells of her feelings for her thirteen grandchildren, their fathers and mothers, the clever things they say and do, and even their naughtinesses, which are never really naughty to her. She also assists the love affair of her oldest granddaughter, and that of her youngest daughter, and it is all told with an unfailing sense of humor and a wealth of affection for children. By author of "The professional aunt."

Wheeler, Marianna. The young mother's handbook; home treatment, diet and physical training for children. N. Y., Harper. c. 165 p. S. $1 n.

Suggestions to mothers as to how to keep their children n health and what to do for simple ailments, by ex-superintendent of the Babies' Hospital, New York.

White, Eliza Orne. The first step; a novel. Bost., Houghton Mifflin. c. 195 p. D. $1.10 n.

The "first step" was when Isabel began to repair the house she inherited. Carpenter, plumber, and architect lead her into appalling expense and humorous complications which are amusingly told, and which effect surprisingly a rather unexpected romance.

Wickson, E: Ja. One thousand questions in California agriculture answered. San Francisco, Pacific Rural Press. c. 257 p. 12°, $1.50.

Wightman, R: The things he wrote to her. N. Y., Century Co. c. 3+108 p. D. 60 c. n.

Letters written by a man to a woman from whom he is separated by distance as well as by convention. He tells his thoughts, of her and life, but does not record happenings and then when the barrier between them is gone, he writes of his love.

Williams, Harold Whitmore. Russia of the Russians. N. Y., Scribner. 430 p. il. pors. fold. map. D. (Countries and peoples ser.) $1.50 n.

Contents: Growth of Russia; Bureaucracy and the constitution; The press; The intelligentsia; Church and people; Literature; Music; Architecture; Peasants and proprietors; Trade and industry; In the chief city. Index.

Williamson, Marg. John and Betty's Irish history visit; il. from photographs. Bost., Lothrop, L. & S. c. 284 p. D. (History visit books) $1.25 n.

This time John and Betty go to Ireland and have just as good a time as when they made their English and Scotch visits.

Witte, Karl. The education of Karl Witte; or, the training of the child; ed., with an introd. by H. Addington Bruce; tr. from the German by Leo Wiener. N. Y., Crowell. c. 40+312 p. D. $1.50 n.

Should the child's education begin immediately with the dawning of his intelligence? Book is argument for this course, relating how a boy of ordinary ability, by careful training, was able at nine years of age to read French, Italian, English, German, Latin, Greek, was a brilliant mathematical scholar, and well versed in physics, chemistry, zoology and botany. Before fourteen Witte had a Ph.D. and at sixteen joined the teaching staff of the University of Berlin. All his later life, until his death in his eighty-third year, was equally brilliant.

Wood, Fs. Asbury, tr. The Hildesbrandslied; tr. from the old High German into English alliterative verse. Chic., Univ. of Chic. c. 16 p. S. pap., 20 c. n.

Wylie, Ida Alena Ross. Five years to find out; with front. by Franklin Booth. Indianapolis, Bobbs-Merrill. c. 373 p. D. $1.35 n.

The Heathcote St. Johns had married for convenience, they had a big house in Portman Square and a huge income from a wealthy uncle whom they really didn't care to remember. They had also forgotten Archie, their little son. It was on his forgotten birthday that the Goblin appeared in Portman Square and it was on the same night that they learned that the huge income had vanished. Then they found out that it is love, not money, that counts, and with the lesson came a surprising denouement.

Young, W: T: Introduction to the study of English literature; from the earliest times to the close of the Victorian Age. N. Y., Putnam. c. 7+238 p. D. 75 c.

By lecturer in English literature, University of London. Contents: Old English literature to the Norman Conquest; Middle Ages; The Renascence; Literature of the middle classes; Revival of romance; Victorian age; Appendix. Index.

Zayas Enríquez, Rafael de. The case of Mexico; and the policy of President Wilson; tr. from the Spanish by Andre Tridon. N. Y., A. & C. Boni. c. 209 p. il. pors. D. $1.35 n.

Written by a Mexican historian and statesman who is entirely out of sympathy with President Wilson's Mexican policy which he thinks must inevitably lead to war. Solution he offers is that the United States should recognize Huerta's government and send an ambassador to Mexico "without previous conditions."

Memories of My Youth
1844-1865

By George Haven Putnam

Late Brevet-Major, 176th Reg't, N. Y. S. Vols.

Author of "Memoir of G. P. Putnam," "Life of Lincoln," "A Prisoner of War in Virginia," "Books and Their Makers," etc.

8°. With Portraits. $2.00 net.

Mr. Putnam's Memories include a record of sojourns in England in 1844, in 1851, and in 1860; experiences as a student in the University of Paris, in Berlin and in Göttingen; and a record of service during the strenuous years of the Civil War, extending from September, 1862, to September, 1865. This service covered campaigns in Louisiana (including the Red River Expedition and work in the completing of Colonel Bailey's Dam), the campaign with Sheridan in the Valley of the Shenandoah, the decisive action at Cedar Creek. The volume includes also a record of experiences in Libby and Danville prisons during the last year of the War. A supplementary chapter gives a brief account of service in maintining order in Savannah after the close of the War but before the re-establishment of civil government.

Reference List of New Publications

Recorded in MARCH, 1914

This Reference List enters the books recorded during the month under (1) author, in Clarendon type, anonymous books having Clarendon type for the first word; (2) title in Roman; (3) subject-heading in SMALL CAPS; (4) name of series in Italics.

A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederick; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas. W: William.

For books received sizes are given in CAPS, Q, O, D, etc., books not received sizes are given in Roman numerals, 4°, 8° 12°, etc. Prices are added except when not supplied by publisher or obtainable only on specific request. Where not specified the binding is cloth.

Those desiring to learn the entire publishing output of the month in any one field should look under one of the following MAIN HEADINGS:

PHILOSOPHY	MEDICINE	LITERATURE
RELIGION AND THEOLOGY	AGRICULTURE	POETRY
SOCIOLOGY	HOUSEHOLD ECONOMICS	DRAMA
LAW	BUSINESS	FICTION
EDUCATION	ENGINEERING, TECHNOLOGY	BIOGRAPHY
PHILOLOGY	FINE ARTS	GEOGRAPHY AND TRAVEL
SCIENCE	GAMES, SPORTS, AMUSEMENTS	HISTORY

Besides the titles listed under each of these headings cross reference is made from each to a limited number of cognate headings which collectively give all the new publications of the month in the given subject or group of subjects.

Inquirers looking for books on a specific topic should look under the general subject to which that topic belongs, i.e. GEOLOGY rather than SILURIAN PERIOD; MATHEMATICS rather than CALCULUS; ECONOMICS rather than WAGES. Books regarding specific Religious denominations, countries and persons, however, should still be sought for under their individual names.

Two Books of First Importance

Wu Tingfang

Now Ready

AMERICA THROUGH THE SPECTACLES OF AN ORIENTAL DIPLOMAT

Wu Tingfang writes as he talks, and everybody remembers his witty and shrewd remarks when he was Chinese Minister to the United States.

This book is not heavy, nor has it anything in common with the hasty "impressions" of tourists. It is written as if to explain these strange United States to the Chinese themselves. Everybody will laugh over it—and do some real thinking, too.

Dr. Wu touches on everything, including long hatpins, feminism, the presidency, barelegged dancing, and religion.

Now Ready

OTHER PEOPLE'S MONEY

And How the Bankers Use It

You—all other booksellers—every man or woman who has money in a bank, trust company or savings fund, or pays premiums on insurance, have a vital interest in this book.

It is simple, clear, direct, and will interest those who have no time for abstruse financial reports on the one side or hasty inaccuracies of newspapers on the other. It is constructive, and offers remedies for present conditions.

It is by a man who is known throughout the United States, and whose statements are so important that they must be read even by his enemies.
